Beck Named Truman's Educator of the Year

Jon Beck, associate professor of computer science, was announced as the Educator of the Year at the 15th annual banquet held April 14. Beck began his career at Truman in 1993. He received his bachelor's degree from The George Washington University, his master's degree from Hood College and his doctorate from West Virginia University.

Each semi-finalist was asked to write an essay and the title of Beck's essay was "Weaponized Teaching: Changing the World One Student at a Time."

"Teaching is not the conveyance of information; teaching is an inspiration," Beck wrote. "It is true that an instructor must possess the knowledge and understanding of a discipline, the instructor's subject area. But far more important is the ability to communicate, to teach, that discipline to others that marks the true educator."

"Students can pick up information from many sources – from books, from the Internet. But this information merely perpetuates the status quo. The goal of education is to change the status quo, to inspire a new generation of students to go beyond the status quo. It is thus that education becomes the weapon, the instrument, for world change."

This year 19 faculty members were nominated for the Educator of the Year award. The committee narrows the group down to 12 semi-finalists and then to six finalists. The honoree is eventually selected by a student committee after observing the faculty members in their classroom, getting input from the students in their classes and reviewing the written responses by the faculty members.

The Educator of the Year program is sponsored by Student Senate, Pershing Society, Phi Eta Sigma and Phi Kappa Phi.

Two Students Receive Goldwater Scholarships

Chris Bay, senior mathematics and computer science double major from Fenton, Mo., and Mackenzie Taylor, junior biology major from Stuart, Neb., were two of 310 students selected as Goldwater Scholars for the 2004-2005 academic year.

The recipients were elected on the basis of academic merit from a field of 1,113 mathematics, science and engineering students who were nominated by the faculties of colleges and universities nationwide.

The one and two year scholarships will cover the cost of tuition, fees, books, and room and board up to a maximum of $7,500 per year.

The Goldwater Foundation is a federally endowed agency established by Public Law 99-661 on Nov. 14, 1986. The Scholarship Program honoring Sen. Barry M. Goldwater was designed to foster and encourage outstanding students to pursue careers in the fields of mathematics, the natural sciences and engineering. The Goldwater Scholarship is the premier undergraduate award of its type in these fields.

Bay and Taylor were mentored through the application process by Roger Festa, professor of chemistry, and Dana Vazzana, associate professor of mathematics. Donna Bailey, instructor in mathematics and coordinator of freshman mathematics, is Bay's adviser. Jeffrey Osborn, associate professor of biology, is Taylor's adviser. The following faculty members served on the committee to select Truman's four nominees for the scholarship: Maria Nagan, assistant professor of chemistry; Pamela Ryan, assistant professor of mathematics; Michael Seipel, associate professor of agriculture; and Tony Vazzana, associate professor of mathematics.

Debate Team Wins National Titles

Truman State University's debate team recaptured the national debate championship April 11 at the National Parliamentary Debate Association National Championship Tournament at California State University-Northridge.

The team of Marie Tenny, junior psychology major from Villa Ridge, Mo., and Ian Samuel, junior computer science major from Pueblo, Colo., established a new record, losing only one ballot in the entire tournament and capturing the first national championship for the Truman team since it first took the national title in March 2000. Their win placed them at the head of an unprecedented field of 302 debate teams from 102 colleges and universities and several international teams (including representatives from China, Belarus, Moldova, Latvia and Lithuania). The Truman team passed prestigious institutions such as the University of California-Berkeley, the Air Force and Naval Academies, the University of Notre Dame and the University of Missouri-Columbia. The tournament was the largest collegiate debate tournament ever held.

In addition to their defeat of the Colorado College in the final round of the tournament, Samuel was the national champion speaker and Tenny was the runner-up. Truman is now the only University to win the national championship twice on unanimous decisions.

In addition to the national titles, the entire Truman program took third in national tournament sweepstakes, which is calculated by comparing the number of wins of the top four teams from each college or university in the tournament. Truman was one of only four squads to have four or more teams in elimination rounds of the tournament.

Truman also was honored with a fifth place ranking in season sweepstakes, which measures the performances of debate programs for the duration of the competitive season.

Tenny is the first woman to win a national championship since 1998, and one of only four in the activity's history.

Three other Truman teams also had outstanding performances, appearing in elimination rounds of the tournament. These teams included Ben Holley, sophomore communication major from Neosho, Mo., and Ryan Walsh, junior communication and philosophy and religion double-major from Cassville, Mo.; Tyson Helder, junior political science and communication double-major from Sioux Falls, S.D., and Holly Magdziarz, freshman linguistics major from Springfield, Mo.; and Matthew Harms, junior economics major from Galesburg, Ill., and Justin Perkins, sophomore economics major from Columbia, Mo. While not advancing to elimination rounds, significant contributions were also made by the teams of Cathy Clark, sophomore from Kansas City, Mo., and Meghana Kunkala, sophomore from Hattiesburg, Miss., and Paul Ragan, sophomore from Springfield, Mo., and Keith Schnakenberg, freshman from Buffalo, Mo.

Vice President for Advancement Named

Mark A. Gambaiana has been named vice president for university advancement and he will begin his duties July 1.

"Mark brings a wealth of experience to Truman," Truman State University President Barbara Dixon said. "He understands university advancement from the ground up and I am confident he will provide outstanding leadership for Truman in this area."

Gambaiana is currently a consultant for Gonsler Gerber Tinker Stuhr providing consulting services in the areas of annual fund, major and planned gifts, board and volunteer development, pre-campaign studies, capital campaign counsel, strategic planning, program audits, alumni and public relations.

He previously served as director of development for Iowa State University's College of Veterinary Medicine, and was a member of the ISU Foundation staff that generated $460 million in gifts during Campaign Destiny. He raised $23.2 million for veterinary medicine programs over a four-year period, including support for endowed scholarships, diagnostic imaging equipment, enhanced patient facilities, programmatic support and capital improvements. The value of scholarships awarded to students increased by 81 percent during his tenure.

The majority of Gambaiana's career has been spent at Morningside College (1985-98), a private liberal arts college in Sioux City, Iowa, where he served the institutional advancement division in a variety of roles. As director of major gifts, he helped raise $32 million for endowment, capital, campus beautification and scholarship priorities during the Investing for the Future campaign. He also served as director of the annual fund, director of alumni relations, assistant director of public relations and sports information director.

Gambaiana received his B.A. degree in mass communications from Morningside College.

Pickler Memorial Library Sponsors Events in Celebration of National Library Week

National Library Week, which began April 18 and will continue until April 24, will be celebrated with several events sponsored by Pickler Memorial Library.

Mark Spitzer will read from his work at 4 p.m., April 21, in the SUB Spanish Room. Spitzer has written "Chum" and "Bottom Feeder," and, had several translations published. His reading will be followed by a book signing. Spitzer is the fiction specialist in the Division of Language and Literature.

Throughout National Library Week there will be a drawing with a prize given away each day. The prizes are: "Lord of the Rings," by J.R.R. Tolkien (books); "Not Till the Fat Lady Sings: The Most Dramatic Sports Finishes of All Time" (book with DVD); "Looney Tunes Golden Collection" (DVDs); "Ken Burns Jazz: The Story of American Jazz" (CDs); and "Book Lust: Recommended Reading for Every Mood, Moment and Reason" by Nancy Pearl (book). For a chance at these prizes, fill out a drawing slip which has a couple of questions about library service and put the drawing slip in the box in the library's main atrium. Bookmarks will also be given away.

For more information, contact Carol Lockhart at clockhar@truman.edu or at 785.7417.

NCAA and MONSTER Launch Student-Athlete Focused Web Site

Student-athletes at NCAA member schools now have a new tool in conjunction with university career centers to assist them with career guidance and information about a range of job opportunities. NCAA CareerCoach™ is a new Web site created by the NCAA in conjunction with corporate partner, Monster, and CBS.

NCAA student-athletes can currently access NCAA CareerCoach via the Association's Web site, <http://www.ncaa.org>, or by going directly to <http://www.ncaacareercoach.com>.

While the core function of NCAA CareerCoach is aimed at helping student-athletes with career exploration, any student can access the site for career guidance.

Truman Broadcast Journalism Students Speak at State Convention, Win Awards

Truman student media staffers participated in a panel presentation on their Vote '04 convergent media project at the Missouri Broadcast Educators Association Conference in Cape Girardeau.

Representatives from the Vote '04 news Team related their experiences in covering the Iowa caucuses and the Missouri primaries for KTRM, TruNews and the Index. Representatives of the Vote '04 news team in attendance were Natalie Churchey, senior communication major from Pryor, Okla.; MayAnn MacCombie, senior communication major from Kirksville; Matt Marble, senior communication major from Blue Springs, Mo.; April Owens, junior communication major from St. Charles, Mo.; Dominick Scalise, senior communication major from Owensville, Mo.; Jonathan Thacker, junior psychology major from Kirksville; and student media adviser Dave Deeley, assistant professor of communication.

Student media teams reported live to KTRM during the caucuses and the primaries. The Vote '04 News Team also produced special election editions of TruNews and the Index. The convergent media coverage of the national election events on-location by student media organizations is the first in the state and among the first in the nation.

In addition, two student broadcast productions won awards in the annual MBEA Student Competition at the convention. Marble and Scalise placed second and received honorable mention in Television News Package. Laura Hordesky, senior communication major from Ellisville, Mo.; Justin Hartmann, a 2003 graduate with a degree in music from Wildwood, Mo.; Katie Stacy, a 2003 graduate with a degree in communication from Kansas City, Mo.; Shoshanna Holland, a 2003 graduate with a degree in communication from Independence, Mo.; and Fadzai Smout from Zimbabwe; took first place in Television Documentary for their video "Stepping Forward." Winners from MBEA Student Competition will also be recognized with plaques by the Missouri Broadcasters Association at their annual conference in June.

The MBEA Student Competition is judged by professional broadcasters throughout the state. Fifteen colleges participated in this year's competition, for which entries produced during the 2003 calendar year were eligible. Elizabeth Clark, associate professor of communication, served as the faculty adviser of the Truman television productions during that time.

Faculty & Staff Campaign Draws to a Close

Congratulations and thank you to the Truman State University community for another successful faculty and staff campaign. More than $75,000 has been raised for funds that provide direct support to students, faculty and staff.

We would like to thank the 2004 Faculty & Staff Campaign co-chairs, Cole Woodcox, professor of English, and Beverly Blodgett, benefits coordinator, for their time and efforts on behalf of the campaign. In addition, we would like to thank the following area coordinators for their volunteer efforts: Von Abbott, Michael Ashcraft, David Bethel, Zac Burden, Wanda Cagle, Barb Clark, Karen Croarkin, Ralph Cupelli, Mona Davis, Elaine De Jovin, Sarah Delaware, Sally Detweiler, Maria Di Stefano, Jerry Findling, Aaron Fine, Jan Fishback, Marilyn Gibbons, Marianna Giovannini, Janet Gooch, Charles Hunsaker,

If you would like to make a gift before the end of the fiscal year, please visit the Faculty & Staff Campaign Web site at <http://isuupdate.truman.edu>. The current participation rate stands at 48 percent. Funds have been established to meet specific needs of the University community, and you can give to your favorite organization or activity or to scholarships that are designed to help the students you want to support. Please call the Office of Advancement at 785.4133 if you have any questions regarding funds at Truman State University.

Accreditation Self-Study Subcommittee to Focus on University Engagement, Community Service

This article is the third of several articles describing the subcommittees, consisting of faculty, staff and students, that are currently engaged in a comprehensive self-study of Truman. The third criterion on which a subcommittee will evaluate the University is Engagement and Community Service.

As part of the University accreditation process, this subcommittee is charged with studying how the University defines and serves its constituencies. The Higher Learning Commission emphasizes higher education as a public good, and members of this subcommittee are currently collecting documentation on some of the ways in which Truman State University partners with external communities to achieve that public service. For example, the subcommittee is gathering evidence related to partnerships with primary and secondary schools; transfer and articulation agreements with community colleges; and many more. For each pattern of evidence, the subcommittee is investigating how the University learns about the needs of our constituencies, and how we respond to those needs in ways that are mutually beneficial.

The subcommittee members include Karen Smith, assistant professor of psychology; Lana Brown, director of Upward Bound; Sally Cook, assistant professor of linguistics; Darl Davis, director of the Regional Professional Development Center and adjunct professor of education; Dean DeCock, assistant professor of mathematics; Sarah Delaware, assistant professor of nursing; Marty Eisenberg, associate vice president for academic affairs, dean of the Residential College Program and associate professor of economics; Ken Hahn, professor of physics; Mark Hanley, associate professor of history; Donna Fisher-Rhinesmith, associate professor of education; Dana Smith, assistant professor of theatre; Jerry Wollmering, director of athletics; and Marcia Kottemann, sophomore history major from Afton, Mo.

Fayemi to be Guest Speaker on Campus

J. Kayode Fayemi will be presenting "Terrorism, Security Sector Governance, and Its Linkages to Human Security: A Perspective from Africa" at 7 p.m., April 22, in the SUB Alumni Room. The lecture will address issues such as the impact of post 9/11 United States, perceptions of security and threat in the African sub-region, the evolving structures and capacities of the African Union (AU), and the evolving relationship between the AU, sub-regional organizations and the United Nations.

Fayemi will lecture to the History of Africa II class at noon, April 22, in Pershing Building 233. The topic of the discussion will be "Reflections on Post-Conflict Reconciliation in Africa: The cases of South Africa, Sierra Leone, Democratic Republic of Congo and Zimbabwe." Both lectures are open to the University community.

Fayemi is the founding director of the Center for Democracy and Development in Nigeria, a research and training institution dedicated to the study and promotion of democratic development, peace-building and human security in Africa. He is currently a scholar-in-residence in the Program of African Studies at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill.

For more information, contact Sylvia Macauley at 785.4663.
