Harry S. Truman Presidential Museum and Library Offers Internship for Summer 2009

All Truman juniors and seniors are encouraged to apply for the Harry S. Truman Presidential Museum and Library 2009 summer internship in Independence, Mo. This eight-week program offers between five and ten credit hours to students and involves a 40-hour work week.

The position is unpaid, however the internship offers a five-hour in-state tuition scholarship, which has been made possible by a generous endowment set up by the family of Fred and Ethel Schwengel.

The Truman Presidential Museum and Library is seeking interns who have strong written and verbal communication skills, organizational skills, basic computer skills, the ability to work independently on multiple tasks and are dependable self-starters.

The Schwengel family also requires that selected interns "immerse themselves in the study of President Truman." At the conclusion of the internship, the intern will prepare a paper on his or her experiences at the Museum and Library and on a specific study of the Truman presidency.

After being selected by a University committee and the Truman Library staff, the intern can work in a variety of areas at the Museum and Library including, but not limited to: archives, public relations, marketing, educational programming, museum development or visitor services. Assignment will be based on the intern's abilities and interests and the Library's needs.

For an application, contact Jeff Gall at 785.7747 or jgall@truman.edu. All applications are due Nov. 28.

Pre-Law Club Presents FBI Criminal Profiler

The Pre-Law Club will host speaker Peter Smerick, an FBI Criminal Profiler, at 7 p.m. Nov. 1 in the Georgian Rooms A-C in the Student Union Building.

The program, "Inside the Mind of Criminal Profilers," will take students behind the scenes regarding the actual role played by criminal profilers compared to Hollywood's portrayal of this career.

Techniques employed by criminal profilers will be discussed and the audience will have an opportunity to analyze several crimes from a behavioral perspective and "walk in the shoes" of a criminal profiler.

Prior to the presentation, Smerick will lead a workshop, "Criminal Profiling Techniques for Prosecutors and Criminal Defense Attorneys," from 3-5 p.m. in the same location. The workshop will familiarize students with a technique utilized by criminal profilers to determine if there is possible deception in statements provided by victims, suspects and witnesses, by analyzing the actual words spoken or written by these individuals. Participants will be offered the opportunity to utilize these techniques while analyzing written statements prepared by alleged rape victims.

Smerick worked for the FBI for 30 years, holding various positions including, special agent, instructor at the FBI Academy, criminal profiler and violent crime analyst. His expert knowledge in the areas of homicide, rape, child molestation, kidnapping and extortion allowed him to testify before both houses of Congress regarding his profile of David Koresh, leader of the Branch Davidians during the group's 1993 stand-off with the FBI in Waco, Texas.

Smerick currently serves as the president and CEO of The Academy Group, the largest privately owned forensic behavioral science firm in the world. He has also provided expert commentary for television, radio and print media regarding violent crime analysis, and he served as the CNN commentator for the movie "Hannibal."

Deadline to Submit Abstracts for the National Conference on Undergraduate Research is Oct. 31

Students must submit abstracts online at <http://ncur.truman.edu> by midnight Oct. 31 in order to be considered for the 2009 NCUR.

Only abstracts submitted through this portal by midnight will be considered for inclusion in Truman's delegation to NCUR, funded by the Provost's office.

Any questions should be directed to the Next STEP Office at 785.7252 or step@truman.edu.

Math Professors Present Research on Calming Anxiety to Enhance Learning

Scott Alberts, a Truman associate professor of mathematics, along with Steven Voss, the chair and professor of mathematics and science at Moberly Area Community College, will present a paper on their collaborative research, "CALM: Calming Anxiety to Learn Mathematics," during the Faculty Forum at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 6 in Magruder Hall 2001.

"Comparing students at Truman State University and Moberly Area Community College, we find that students at both schools have significant anxieties, but these anxieties vary widely by group and ability level," Alberts said in describing their research. "Students at both schools understand the importance of learning mathematical ideas, but many face real anxiety in and out of the classroom."

The interdisciplinary research of Alberts and Voss has been examining whether ideas from Cognitive Behavior Therapy (CBT) can be adapted to the mathematics classroom, and whether mathematics teachers can be trained to use these techniques to help their students. CBT involves recognizing destructive and debilitating beliefs then learning to refute them and replace them with constructive beliefs. Their research has been funded by the National Science Foundation as part of Truman's larger STEP Grant.

Nominations Being Accepted for the USA TODAY All-USA College Academic First Team

USA TODAY is now accepting nominations for the 2009 USA TODAY All-USA College Academic Team.

The 20th annual program honors full-time undergraduates at four-year colleges, who not only excel academically, but also extend their reach beyond the classroom to benefit society.

The top 20 students are designated members of USA TODAY's All-USA College Academic First Team. They will be featured in USA TODAY in March and will receive trophies and cash awards of $2,500.

Awards are open to full-time undergraduates of at least junior standing at four-year institutions in the United States or its territories. Students must be nominated by their schools and be willing to be featured in USA TODAY.

Schools may nominate as many students as they consider appropriate candidates for this award. To nominate, visit <https://www.all-usanomination.com/>.

Criteria include grades, academic rigor, leadership, activities and most important, the student's essay describing his or her most outstanding intellectual endeavor as a college undergraduate.

Former U.S. Representative Richard Gephardt poses with Truman faculty, staff and students during the Fourth Annual Statewide Conference on Civic Engagement and Service Learning, sponsored by Missouri Campus Compact and hosted at Washington University in St. Louis on Oct. 17-18. Members from Truman's 24-person delegation gave two 25-minute and two 50-minute presentations during the event. The trip was sponsored by The Center for Teaching and Learning and the Interdisciplinary Studies Office. Presenters included: Marc Becker, Jason McDonald, Roberta Donahue, Saraniya Sriganesan, Julie Lochbaum, Eugenia Siegel, Michael Kelrick, Cassie Phillips and Brett Wiley.

NOTABLES

Warren Gooch, professor of music, will be one of two composers featured in the 2008-2009 "Symposium 34 for New Band Music." His work, "Cellgams 2.0," was selected from a national pool of 62 scores for a recording session and open rehearsals. The events will take place Feb. 13-14 at the College of William and Mary, under the auspices of the Virginia chapter of the Collegiate Band Directors National Association. Gooch will conduct the Virginia State Intercollegiate Band.

Truman Media Network to Provide In-Depth Coverage of Election Day 2008

The Truman Media Network (TMN), consisting of representatives from KTRM 88.7 The Edge radio, News 36 KTRM-TV and the Index newspaper, will be providing in-depth coverage on Election Day 2008 from around the state of Missouri.

Teams will be traveling to St. Louis, Columbia and Jefferson City to capture the spirit and atmosphere as the towns prepare to celebrate this historic event. The teams will provide audio, video, print, blog and photo updates to the TMN main web site throughout the evening.

A reporting team in Kirksville will cover events both on campus and in the surrounding areas, including the happenings at the Democratic and Republican Headquarters, as well as the Adair County Clerk's Office. The Kirksville home team will be broadcasting live on KTRM 88.7 throughout the evening.

Heather Turner, KTRM News Director, will host an election night special including a debate between the College Republicans, Democrats and Libertarians, guest appearances by political analysts, Jay Self, assistant professor of communication and Kevin Minch, associate professor of communication, as well as frequent poll updates on the national, statewide, regional and local scale.

Students Encouraged to Apply For Mathematical Biology Undergraduate Research Program

Truman's Mathematical Biology program is currently seeking talented, team-oriented undergraduates who are eager for an interdisciplinary experience to participate in Truman's Research-focused Learning Communities (RLC) in Mathematical Biology Program.

This program is a one-of-a-kind opportunity for undergraduates with an interest in exploring or working in an area of growing scientific and economic importance.

Participants will be part of an interdisciplinary quarter of two undergraduates and two faculty co-mentors (one each from biology and mathematics). Each team will design and carry out a cutting-edge research project. Undergraduate participants will receive a generous research stipend, room and board for the summer program and funds to travel to a national professional conference to present their results. The research experience will also satisfy requirements for Truman's interdisciplinary minor in mathematical biology.

Because the project topics available to interdisciplinary teams of undergraduates span a broad range of biological scales and organization, and because the mathematics involved span an equally broad range, this program has something to offer any student interested in applied or abstract mathematics or biology.

For more information about the project topics available, visit <http://mathbio.truman.edu/research/>. Applications are due Nov. 14. Questions about projects should be addressed to a faculty mentor. Questions about the mathematical biology program should be directed to Jason Miller, associate professor of mathematics, at millerj@truman.edu.

UNITED WAY

CAMPAIGN UPDATE

After the ninth week of Truman's United Way campaign, the faculty, staff and students have contributed more than $49,000 which means Truman has met 88 percent of its goal.

For questions regarding the University's campaign, or to get a replacement pledge form, contact Co-Chairs Brad Chambers from the Office of Advancement at bchamber@truman.edu, or Debra Kerby, professor of accounting, at dkerby@truman.edu.
