Northeast's 125th: Coming to Kirksville

On this Thursday, Feb. 13, a rededication of the presidential portraits and opening ceremonies of the University's 125th anniversary celebration will be held at 5 p.m. in the SUB Quiet Lounge. All members of the University community are invited. The significance of this day goes back to 1867. It was on Feb. 13 that Joseph Baldwin arrived in Kirksville for the first time and chose the town as the location for his school.

By the fall of 1866, Joseph Baldwin had become dissatisfied with the condition of schools in Indiana, and he was determined to return to Missouri to start a teacher training school. He had almost decided to locate in St. Joseph, Mo., however, several influences were at work trying

New Division Formed

President Russell Warren has announced the formation of a new academic division at Northeast. The new unit, the Division of Human Potential and Performance, is comprised of three related academic areas already in existence: Communication Disorders, Health and Exercise Science, and Nursing. Current faculty in those areas will staff the new division.

According to Warren, "Our University has built a national reputation for educational innovation based on solid achievement. We are combining the strengths of three excellent programs in one forward-looking unit that will serve present and future students' needs. Existing degree programs will remain the same. Academic disciplines in the new Division of Human Potential and Performance will be responsible for their own curricula and program accreditations. Northeast can thus provide academic leadership while making careful use of human and fiscal resources."

Jack Magruder, vice president for academic affairs, noted, "Due to the fact that division heads Dr. William Richerson (Health and Exercise Science) and Dr. Elsie Simms (Nursing) will be retiring within the next year, the decision has been made to have Dr. Cornelis Koutstaal assume leadership of this new division. Dr. Koutstaal, currently head of the Communication Disorders Department, will begin in his new position July 1, 1992."

"I am honored and humbled by this new challenge, and I look forward to working with a fine group of faculty colleagues," Koutstaal said.

All students, faculty and staff are cordially invited to a rededication of the Presidential Portraits and opening ceremonies of the University's # 125th Anniversary.

Warren Addresses University

President Russell Warren presented a state of the University address to students, faculty and staff Feb. 5. Following are highlights of his speech which included a look at the university's assets and liabilities, proposed tuition and room and board increases, an increase in financial aid, and reallocations of funds.

According to President Warren, as a result of state budget cuts, Northeast lost roughly $450 per student this year. In March, he will ask the Board of Governors for a total increase in tuition of $425 per student, both in-state and out-of-state, for next year. He will also propose a $280 increase in room and board, the same as this year. Other increases will include a $100 orientation fee for new freshmen and a $10 counseling fee for all students.

Warren stressed that in order to assist those students who cannot afford the increases, there will be an increase of more than $400,000 worth of financial aid.

"I don't by any means give up on the state, nor do I feel bad about this state's position. I remind you all first of the fact that they are paying 67 percent of each student's education," Warren said.

Northeast's "liabilities" include $21 million worth of deferred maintenance and renovation on campus, a $2 million disadvantage per faculty member salary and an underfunded equipment and operations budget by about $2 million a year.

In order to compensate for money the state is unable to provide, Northeast will reallocate resources to save more than $540,000. Warren said that Northeast will not experience any faculty/staff reductions; however the university will cut back on the funding of some programs.

The undergraduate research program will be maintained but the stipend will be eliminated next year. Of the 790 students currently participating in the program, 99 receive stipends. "We will be eliminating the stipend next year not because we need the money, although we do need the money, but because we believe fundamentally that it's great to start a program with an incentive like finances and we think that was a great idea, but ultimately, education isn't something we should pay students to engage in," Warren said. There will also be changes with the legislative internships offered each spring. Funding for this internship will now be solicited from legislators. The funds saved from the legislative intern program will start a university-wide internship office.

"What I want to be sure I get across is that these are important programs and they will continue, but fundamentally we can look to other sources for funding in terms of the legislative intern program and at the same time, we think, expand internships throughout the country," Warren said.

The university will merge the Nursing Division, the Health and Exercise Science Division

Rhoads Named Director of Services for Individuals with Disabilities

Joseph Rhoads, associate professor of industrial science, has been appointed director of the Services for Individuals with Disabilities Office, a student/staff support service program located in Violette Hall 175.

The SID Office provides and coordinates support services to students with disabilities and serves as an information referral service for non-disabled students and the community. Services include assistance with orientation, handicapped parking, advocacy and guidance, classroom accommodation, faculty liaison, tutor referral, reader referral, interpreter/notetaker referral, housing referral, resource file material, test proctoring, independent living skills referral and agency liaison. These services are provided according to individual needs.

Rhoads was previously associated with the SID Office through students conducting research there and replaces former SID director Jordan Davis, was reassigned by his church to California.

Rhoads formerly taught in the Knox City and Brashear public schools in Missouri. He was also involved with Northeast's Upward Bound program.

to interest him on a location in the eastern part of the state. One of these was John B. Merwin, editor of the American Journal of Education, who lived in St. Louis and urged Baldwin to come there and confer with other interested parties.

Perhaps a more pressing invitation came from a relative, J.J. Grigsby of Kirksville. In their frequent correspondence Grigsby shared with Baldwin his concern of the shortage of suitable teachers in Missouri, while Baldwin, in turn, related his dreams of a fine teacher training school. Grigsby learned that a company was eager to sell a building in Kirksville which had been under construction when the Civil War began. Although it was unfinished, it had housed the Cumberland Academy for one term and had been largely idle since. Grigsby described the building to Baldwin as an ideal spot for his proposed school.

In February 1867, Baldwin went to St. Louis where he conferred with Merwin and other leaders in educational circles. Either while there or on the train journey from Indiana, Baldwin lost some of his travel money and asked Merwin for $50. Merwin agreed to lend the sum on one condition: that Baldwin go to Kirksville and look over the situation there.

Influenced both by Grigsby and Merwin's loan, Baldwin took a train to Macon where he rented a horse and buggy and continued to Kirksville arriving on a cold Feb. 13 at Grigsby's home. There he found that Grigsby had invited a group of interested persons to come to the house, meet Baldwin, and listen to his ideas about teacher education and the type of institution which should best prepare teachers. They responded enthusiastically.

Baldwin spent several days in Kirksville, meeting more persons and getting a sense of the possible clientele for his venture. Naturally, he visited the half-finished academy building at Mulanix and Hickory streets. After some negotiation he agreed to rent the structure for 10 years at a cost of $100 annually. He then returned to St. Louis where he reported on his decision.

On his return to Logansport Seminary in Indiana, he resigned the presidency there and made arrangements to move his family to Missouri. The Baldwin family arrived in Kirksville either at the end of March or first of April.

Lyceum Presents Shakespeare

The Acting Company will perform Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream on Feb. 26 at 8 p.m. in Baldwin Hall. This production is part of the 1991-92 Lyceum Series. Tickets for the performance are free for students, faculty, and staff and will be available beginning Feb. 22 at the Student Activities Board Office. in the SUB.

A Midsummer Night's Dream is one of Shakespeare's most popular comedies. The play is filled with memorable characters and deals with self-discovery and love. Irish director Joe Dowling focuses on deeper levels of meaning causing a non-traditional approach to this production. The play is set to an imaginative environment inspired by the painting of 15th century artist Hieronymus Bosch, and live music, from country and western to Motown, plays an integral part.

The Acting Company was founded in 1972 by Margot Harley and the late John Houseman and is the only non-for-profit theater company in America dedicated to presenting plays in the classical repertory for audiences across the United States. The Company's goals are to develop young classical actors from all ethnic and racial groups and to develop an appreciation for theater among diverse audiences. The director, Dowling, is on leave from the Gaiety School of Acting, the only full-time independent drama conservatory in Ireland, which he founded and is currently director.

Piano Festival to be Held

The Ninth Annual NMSU Piano Festival will be held Feb. 15 in Baldwin Auditorium and the SUB. The event features piano evaluations for students in grades six through 11 and a scholarship competition for high school seniors. Students from Iowa, Illinois, Missouri and Tennessee have been chosen from the preliminary auditions to participate in the on-campus events.

Also featured in the festival will be the guest artist, Marvin Blickenstaff, professor of music at Goshen College in Indiana. Blickenstaff is a nationally known recitalist and lecturer, having presented more than 500 workshops with local music teacher organizations. He co-authored Music Pathways, a series for beginning piano students, and is on the editorial board of the American Music Teacher.

The schedule of events for the day is as follows:

and the Communication Disorders Department. That will save more than $100,000 to be used the year after this toward savings. See related story.

"We believe that merger will be more efficient and more effective and we think by combining those health-oriented programs we'll be able in essence to engage in some interactive interconnected programs that we otherwise wouldn't," Warren said.

Warren does not feel the state will be able to do anything about the university's finances soon because of other fundamental needs that exist in the state. He also expressed a sympathetic attitude for the state's legislators.

"I don't expect much in the way of help in the next two or three years, but long term, I certainly do expect help, and I have optimism to believe it will come," Warren said.

Warren presented to students a way that they can make a difference and "a statement about the fact that not all of these problems have to be solved financially." He asked student organizations and clubs to consider adopting a classroom and doing the basic maintenance; two or three organizations have already volunteered.

The University will be able to restore the 3 1/2 percent cut from this past year's non-academic operating budgets which allowed Northeast to balance the budget.

"The money will not be restored across the board, but rather based on the merit of the request of the division," Warren said.

With Board approval, $500,000 toward equipment will be restored. Warren said there will still be a shortage of $600,000 over what the equipment budget was 12 months ago.

Warren said the University will start a fund of $100,000 to be built up each year for building maintenance. This will allow the University to meet long-term building needs.

The University will be able to add 10 faculty and academic staff positions where there is the greatest shortage and student need. The same is true for certain non-academic areas as well. With Board approval, the University will institute a 2 percent salary increase.

"I'd prefer to call it an honorarium because it's not much of a salary increase. But, there needs to be at least a symbolic statement to the faculty and to the staff that they work hard and we appreciate them and hopefully in the not too far future, we can do a whole lot better than that because they deserve it," Warren said.

Warren noted other positive developments including expansion of Northeast's counseling service, beginning July 1, and additional foreign study abroad programs. He said emergency phone boxes will be installed this summer throughout campus that automatically signal to the police station if there is a problem on campus. A plan, largely developed by students, for co-ed housing will be implemented in the fall.

Warren praised Dean of Students Vonnice Nichols and all of the people involved in moving forward the University's code of conduct, sexual harassment policy and conflict of interest policy. He also mentioned that divisions will begin, if they haven't already, to work on an equitable faculty evaluation system.

Warren said that the completion of the five-year plan will represent a major milestone for the University. A visiting team will be on campus Feb. 15-18 to conduct a comprehensive institutional review.

"We will of course be implementing, as soon as the present five-year plan is through, a new long-range plan, one that especially centers on active learning," Warren said.

In closing, Warren stated that "we're poor... But, we're not poor where it counts... So, with that attitude, and with, apologetically, a tuition increase, and with the effort reaching out to the legislature, and with the possibility of some additional debt by refinancing, and with continued saving where they don't hurt programs, we're going to be the finest undergraduate university in the nation."

Notables

Jane Bartling, instructor of health and exercise science, and Mike Jackson, assistant professor of health and exercise science, have received a grant for comprehensive health from the Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education. The grant will be used to develop the Northeast Health Resource Center and develop key skills and core competencies in an area public school.

Ben Bennani, associate professor of language and literature and editor of Painbrush and Bestia, was recently invited to serve on the Missouri Arts Council's Literature Advisory Panel for a third term that expires June, 30, 1992. As a panel member, Bennani primarily reviews and evaluates applications to the MAC for matching funds, according to funding guidelines and criteria approved by the Council, and provides the Council with recommendations for funding within accepted budget guidelines. Other responsibilities include consulting with the arts organizations in Missouri to strengthen and improve the quality and service of arts programs throughout the state; guiding the Missouri Arts Council in the future development and extension of the arts in Missouri and throughout the country; making recommendations to the council for the evolution of MAC policy; and serving as constant source of information and ideas for the council and its staff in carrying out their mission.

The NMSU Beta chapter of Sigma Tau Gamma was recently recognized by its national organization as the best chapter in the Great Plains region by being awarded the STG Award.

Shantaram Bhat, instructor of French, has had a paper on the topic, "How to motivate beginners at the university level in learning French," accepted by the American Association of Teachers of French to be presented at their annual meeting held in Strasbourg, France, July 18-23.

Marlow Ediger, professor of education, had the following manuscripts published: "Computers in Science," in The Progress of Education and "Applying Psychological Principles to Teaching Technical Education," in The American Technical Education Association Journal. Ediger will also be listed in Who's Who in American Education.

Barb Glosier, senior health and exercise science major, will have her article titled "Effect of Blood Alcohol Content on Reaction Times in College Students" published in the next volume of the Missouri Journal of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

Warren Gooch, assistant professor of music, will have an original music composition performed at the Society of Composers Region VI Conference, to be held Feb. 20-22 at Texas Christian University. The composition, titled, Movement for Brass Quintet, was one of 45 pieces selected for performance at the conference from a field of composers from 31 states and four foreign countries. The same composition was premiered at a new music festival co-hosted by Washington State University and the University of Idaho on Feb. 1

Lewis B. Hershey, II, assistant professor of business administration, has had his article titled "Re-Conceptualizing the Peripheral Persuasion Concept: The Dimensions of Persuasion Model," accepted for publication in the 1992 Proceedings of the Midwest Marketing Association Annual Meeting. The article develops a model of information processing used by consumers when processing advertisements emotionally. Work for the article was made possible by a summer research grant from the Vice President for Academic Affairs.

Annette Jacob, business academic advisor, received her certification as a clinical member from the American Association of Marriage and Family Therapy.

David Lesczynski, professor of agricultural science, has recently been elected to the Board of Directors of the American Association of State Colleges of Agricultural and Renewable Resources. AACARR is the organization of state universities offering undergraduate programs in agriculture and natural resources and is an affiliate organization of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

Jerry Mayhew, professor of exercise science, and former graduate student Mary Thissen-Milder recently published an article titled "Selection and Classification of High School Volleyball Players From Performances Tests" in the Journal of Sports Medicine and Physical Fitness.

Emmanuel Nnadozie, assistant professor of economics, presented a paper, "An Assessment of the Dutch Disease Syndrome in the Non-Industrial Sector," at the Annual Meeting of the African Studies Association in St. Louis in November 1991. Nnadozie also served on the panel.

Seymour Patterson, associate professor of economics, gave a presentation on Central America and Panama at the first Economics Club Roundtable on Jan. 31.

Craig Payne, language and literature graduate teaching assistant, has had two articles, "Love and the Scholar" and "Liberty, Education, and the Multi-Ethnic Society," accepted for upcoming publication in The St. Croix Review. Payne's poem, "On Viewing the Paintings of Bruno Liljefors," also appeared in the January issue of First Things.

David Cratis Williams, assistant professor of speech communication, presented a paper titled "Culture, Argumentation, Rationality and Ideology: the Case of the Ante-Bellum American South" at the Conference on Practical Applications of Argumentation Theory to Politics, Business and Industry. The Conference, held in St. Petersburg, Russia on Jan. 22-29, was sponsored by the St. Petersburg International Research Center on Argumentation and Communication.

Bottom Line

"Buy the post-it notes in 3 X 5 inch size and have Printing Services cut them in half to 2 1/2 X 3 inch. This saves approximately 50 percent over buying 3 X 3 inch precut."
