The composition, which was selected from several hundred scores by a juried process, will be performed by the USC School of Music's "New Horizons" concert band. Freese's guitar piece "Scattered Memories" also received a performance on the "New Music Hartford" concert series in Hartford, Conn., Sept. 18.

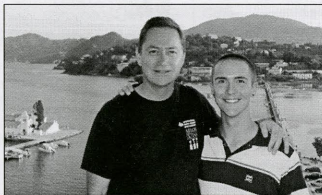

Daniel Mandell, professor of history, had his article "Eager Partners in Reform: Indians and Frederick Baylies in Southern New England, 1780-1840," published in "Native Americans, Christianity, and the Reshaping of Early America's Religious Landscape."

Mike McCarthy, a senior accounting major, and Spencer Clark, a senior biology major, qualified for the National Guard FLW College Fishing Regional Championship to be hosted by Indiana University Nov. 4-6 on Lake Monroe. McCarthy and Clark finished fifth and second respectively in the qualifying tournaments on Bull Shoals Lake and Lake Ouachita and earned the University a $3,500 donation. If they win at the regional championship, the University will receive a $25,000 unrestricted donation and the student's bass-fishing club will receive a Ranger 177TR bass boat valued at $25,000. The top five teams at the regional championship will also advance to the national championship for a shot at winning $50,000 for their school and $25,000 and a Ranger 177TR bass boat for their club. Last year, McCarthy and Clark finished in sixth place at the College Fishing Challenge in Murray, Ky.

Marc Rice, associate professor of musicology, had his paper "Cincinnati's 'Jazz Ark': WNOP and the Rise and Decline of Radio-Free Jazz in the Heartland," accepted for the national meeting of the Society of American Music. Rice's paper draws from archival research and personal interviews to examine the role of jazz radio in the musical life of his hometown. The Society is an internationally recognized academic organization of musicologists, writers and scholars who focus on American music. The conference will be attended by approximately 800 members, and will take place in Cincinnati in March 2011.

Jones Teaches and Performs on Corfu

He taught master classes on trumpet and was a featured performer along with hornist Eric Ruske (Cleveland Orchestra, Empire Brass), trombonist Don Lucas (Boston University) and professional brass players from several Greek orchestras. Truman senior music major Michael Duncan (trombone) was also a participant in the seminar. Jones and Duncan are pictured here on the famous Kanoni hill on Corfu.

IFC Participates in Service Activity

Truman's Interfraternity Council (IFC) and the Kirksville Watershed Commission co-sponsored a cleanup of roads in the Forest Lake Watershed the weekend of Sept. 11.

Active fraternity members joined potential new members in picking up trash along eight miles of roadway in areas that drain into Kirksville's water supply.

Participants fanned out to clean up all or parts of the Orrick, Missouri, Michigan and Youngstown trails.

The event provided an opportunity for potential members to experience the fraternities' commitments to service and to talk to active members in an informal atmosphere.

The IFC is a self-governing body composed of six executive board members and 15 fraternities representing nearly 600 undergraduate students. IFC strives to promote excellence among its member fraternities in numerous areas including scholarship, individual chapter development, leadership and community service.

Truman Nursing Students Visit Philippines

Twelve senior nursing students took part in the Transcultural Nursing Experience this summer, traveling to the Philippines from May 14-June 5.

During a week-long stay in metropolitan Manila, these students participated in maternal and nursery care at the nonprofit government facility José Reyes Memorial Medical Center. While there, they worked with mothers and infants who generally could not afford health care, developing competencies in the assessment of birthing mothers and newborns and in cross-cultural communication.

From Manila, students traveled south to the central province of Iloilo City, where they enrolled in a transcultural nursing program at West Visayas State University. Clinical experiences during this program included visits to homes, a pediatric unit, the social hygiene clinic, a leprosarium and a nursing home.

The students prepared for this trip through classes about cultural immersion and communicable diseases last spring.

Those who participated included Becky Beiting, Jamie Boschert, Rachel Cope, Julie Dusheke, Karrie Evens, Kate Hagenhoff, Theresa Hasting, Kassie Henning, Katy Leakey, Jackie Ross, Alyssa Scott and Emily Shaw.

These individuals will present a program entitled "Transcultural Experience in the Philippines" at 7 p.m. Sept. 28 in the Student Union Building Activities Room. The event is open to the public and refreshments will be served.
