Coughlin Appointed Acting Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs, Search Committee Formed

Richard Coughlin, dean of the library, has agreed to serve as Acting Vice President for Academic Affairs beginning May 10 until the Provost position is filled.

Coughlin will be assisting current provost Troy Paino during the transition to his new position as University President.

"Dean Coughlin is a trusted and respected administrator who knows the University well," Paino said. "I am deeply indebted to him for his willingness to serve in this capacity in the interim. I know he will do a wonderful job assisting me during the transition."

Paino has already formed a search committee for the next Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs at Truman. The Search Committee includes Janet Gooch, professor and chair of communication disorders, committee co-chair; Priscilla Riggle, dean of the School of Arts & Letters, committee co-chair; Clifton Kreps, professor and chair of classic and modern languages; Teresa Heckert, professor of psychology; Sally West, professor of history; Stephen Allen, professor of business administration; James Guffey, professor of mathematics and statistics and president of Faculty Senate; Janet Romine, librarian; Rebecca Charles, assistant registrar; Kathy Powell, assistant to the provost; and Isaac Robinson, vice president of Student Senate.

The committee met Feb. 19 and was asked by Paino to work fast in hopes of finding someone willing to begin by the start of next academic year.

The position announcement went out the final week of February.

The committee will begin reviewing application materials in April, conduct off-campus interviews with semi-finalists by mid-April and invite the finalists to campus during the last week in April and first week in May.

If for any reason the committee decides to delay interviews until the fall, campus will be notified.

The committee will submit a list of "acceptable" candidates with a summary of their strengths and weaknesses to Paino.

At the end of the process, after receiving input from the search committee and the entire campus community, he will decide who can effectively work with him, faculty, staff, students, the President's Executive Staff and academic administrators in helping set the course for Truman.

Leadership Recognition Program 2010

Sponsored by the Center for Student Involvement.

Students, faculty and staff can nominate exceptional student leaders, advisers, organizations and events on campus today.

Nomination forms are due by 5 p.m. March 17 in the CSI Office, lower level of the Student Union Building.

Contact the CSI at 785.4222 or csilrp@truman.edu for more information.

Cupelli, Johnson Lead Faculty and Staff Campaign

This year's Faculty and Staff Campaign is being headed by Amber Johnson, chair of society and environment, and Ralph Cupelli, assistant to the Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs.

Recently, faculty and staff received information about supporting the Truman Foundation through the 2010 Faculty and Staff Campaign.

Campaign goals include $170,000 in gift support and a participation rate of 60 percent.

Faculty and staff members may designate their gifts to any of the foundation's 464 funds or direct their gifts to the Truman Fund for Excellence, a fund used to support the University's areas of greatest need.

There will be a drawing April 1 for prizes, including the reserved parking spots for one year. Any gift to the campaign qualifies individuals for the parking spot drawing, and first-time gifts to the campaign qualify individuals for the Truman apparel package drawing.

This fall, Truman entered into the public phase of "Bright Minds Bright Futures," a comprehensive, five-year campaign to raise $30 million.

Every gift will count toward both this year's Faculty and Staff and the "Bright Minds Bright Futures" campaign goals.

For more information about the campaign, go to <http://isupport.truman.edu> or <http://campaign.truman.edu>.

Free Application for Federal Student Aid

File the 2010-2011 FAFSA located at <http://www.fafsa.gov> before April 1 to be considered for all available funding. For more information, visit the Financial Aid Office, McClain 103, 785.4130.

ART EXHIBIT HIGHLIGHTS PARTNERSHIP

Truman is partnering with Indian Hills Community College, in Ottumwa, Iowa, for an exhibition in the University Art Gallery.

The exhibit includes artwork from Truman students and Indian Hills faculty members. The exhibit highlights Truman's relationship with Indian Hills, a community college from which Truman receives several transfer students.

Mark McWhorter, artist and chair of the art department at Indian Hills, is judging the works of Truman students, which were submitted by Feb. 25. Students were invited to submit up to three pieces for consideration. Numerous honors and awards will be given to the pieces.

McWhorter will conduct a public talk at 5 p.m. March 2 in Ophelia Parrish 2210. An opening reception will follow at 6 p.m. in the University Art Gallery.

The free exhibit runs through April 13 and is open to the public.

Contact Aaron Fine at afine@truman.edu with questions or visit <http://art.truman.edu/artgallery.asp> for more information or gallery hours.

YouTube Video Making Contest

Make a YouTube video that promotes the University to potential international students and earn up to $400. Videos must be submitted to iso01@truman.edu by March 19. E-mail Wilson Zhang at zz8224@truman.edu with questions.

Forensics Claims State Title and Awards

Truman Forensics won the state title Feb. 20-21, for the first time since 2004.

Other awards included the Bob Derryberry Overall Award, given to the best team in the tournament. The debaters also won the Harold Lawson Overall Debate Award.

These awards are named after former, influential Missouri coaches. The speech competitors also took third place for overall individual events sweepstakes.

"This weekend's victory highlighted how far we have come this season, not just as individual competitors, but as a team," Debate Coach Kristopher Stroup said. "Winning debate sweepstakes was great preparation for nationals, but the real prize was the overall award, which highlighted the contributions of both sides of the program and is a terrific measure of team quality across the board."

Truman also earned several individual state champion awards, including Christian Johns in Lincoln-Douglas speaking, Mel Kapitan in impromptu speaking, Samantha Jones in poetry interpretation and Kyle LaVelle in extemporaneous speaking.

Other awards included Andrew Grojean who took fourth in after dinner speaking, sixth in impromptu and second in pentathlon. Jessica Petrie took second in impromptu, second in extemporaneous and second in persuasion. Jones and Grojean also placed third in duo interpretation.

Top Novice Awards included Jones in poetry, LaVelle in extemporaneous and after dinner speaking and Petrie in impromptu, communication analysis and persuasion.

Additional debate awards include Susan Taylor who placed second, Elizabeth Hatting fifth and Sarah Backhaus sixth. Lincoln-Douglas speaking included quarterfinalist awards for Hatting, Johns, and Backhaus, while Taylor made it to the semi-finals. In parliamentary debate, Johns received a fourth place speaking award and Backhaus fifth. Other notables in this partner format included octofinalist awards for the team of Petrie/Taylor, and semifinals for Johns/Hatting. Backhaus and Dylan Clark won second overall.

Anyone interested in forensics should contact Kristi Scholten, director of forensics, at kscholten@truman.edu.

Foundation Awards Study Abroad Scholarships

The Truman State University Foundation awards 10 $1,500 scholarships annually to students who are participating in a summer, faculty-led study abroad experience.

The students who have been selected as recipients in 2010 will study abroad in various programs, including Archeological Dig/Mideast Study Tour, China, Costa Rica, Europe in Transition, Sacred Sites of Greece and Transcultural Experience in the Philippines.

More than $444,000 in scholarships have been awarded from the Truman State University Foundation in 2009-2010. These scholarships are made possible through generous contributions from alumni, parents and friends of the University.

Kirkville Unites to Attract Google Fiber

Students and employees from Truman and S.A.T. Still University of Health Sciences are organizing to support an effort to convince Google to bring one gigabit data fiber connections to every home and business in Kirkville.

Several Truman and ATSU representatives, along with leaders from the city of Kirkville, area utilities, businesses and interested citizens, began the process of responding to an open request for information from Google at a meeting Feb. 23.

According to Google, the company plans to install and test fiber-to-the-home Internet networks in one or more selected locations around the country. The connections would be more than one gigabit per second, which is more than 100 times faster than most services today. Google asked communities to submit a proposal outlining why they would be ideal candidates for the experiment.

Bryan Krusniak, director of ATSU's Department of Information Technology and Services, began organizing key players from both universities, the city and several local businesses last week to help give the proposal form. As of March 1, a Facebook group supporting the initiative included nearly 1,800 fans, and a campaign website is under development.

"A key component to making this proposal successful is demonstrating to Google that Kirkville wants and needs this kind of service," Krusniak said. "We need to prove that we can do great things with the added bandwidth. That means bringing lots of voices to the table to brainstorm ideas about what this would mean for the community. It also means we need the community to demonstrate widespread support for the project."

On its website, Google imagines, "sitting in a rural health clinic, streaming three-dimensional medical imaging over the web and discussing a unique condition with a specialist in New York," "downloading a high-definition, full-length feature film in less than five minutes" or "collaborating with classmates around the world while watching live 3-D video of a university lecture."

Kevin Minch, director of the Truman Institute and one of the early collaborators on the initiative, said, "The potential academic applications are significant. Not only can this enhance our capacity to perform research and allow students to collaborate at a distance, but winning access to this network could really help Truman further fulfill its statewide educational mission by providing extra-high quality distance learning opportunities that are consistent with Truman's mission."

Minch echoed Krusniak's call for public involvement and described efforts already under way to get the Truman community involved.

"Anyone can submit a nomination to Google advocating for Kirkville as a site for this project," Minch said. "Additional applications strengthen our argument. We are also working with members of Truman's Student Senate to sponsor a viral video contest encouraging students to design short advertisements for YouTube and the web-based portion of Kirkville's application."

The Truman Institute will sponsor a public rally at 8 p.m. March 4 in Violette 1000 on the Truman campus. Video cameras will be present to record testimony by members of the University and Kirkville communities about how they would use the enhanced bandwidth to enhance their lives and work. Comments will be edited and used to provide additional support to the application.

"We want to use the same kind of innovative technology that Google uses to promote its products to sell Kirkville," said Todd Kuhns, web services manager for Truman ITS and a member of the Kirkville City Council. "That means viral video, the web and social networking. Our students are masters of these media and can demonstrate the potential for what more bandwidth could do for Kirkville."

People interested in learning more about the initiative can visit the group on the web at <http://www.fiber4kirkville.info/> or join the Facebook group at <http://www.facebook.com/pages/Google-Fiber-For-Kirkville/302090707335?ref=search&id=36105437.1858266783.1&v=wall>.
