Cavett Headlines Homecoming

Dick Cavett

This year's featured Homecoming entertainment is Dick Cavett. Cavett's presentation, which is co-sponsored by the Lyceum Series and the Alumni Association, will be held at 8 p.m.,

Nov. 6, in Pershing Arena.

Actor Charlton Heston was originally scheduled to perform during Homecoming. A six-week London production, which Heston is involved in, forced him to knock out 10 scheduled performances, one of which was NMSU.

"Cavett is an adequate replacement for Heston," said David Clithero Alumni/Development. "Reaction [towards the replacement] has been very good."

Probably best known for his Emmy-award winning talk show, The Dick Cavett Show, Cavett also has made a name for himself as a comedy writer for Tonight Show hosts Jack Paar and Johnny Carson, a popular interviewer, a comedian and through two books he co-authored, Cavett and Eye on Cavett.

Cavett's biography describes him as a "television alchemist." "He takes the medium's cheapest commodity—talk—and refines it into gold."

Personalities interviewed by Cavett include GroUCHO Marx, Norman Mailer, Orson Wells and John Gielgud.

"Cavett is a fairly recognized name and appeal is the most important aspect with the wide range of spectators that might be in the crowd," Clithero said.

Free tickets will be available to students, faculty and staff.

Houser Revisits Tanglewood

Every summer strains of music float through the trees of the 210-acre estate tucked away in the Berkshire Hills of Massachusetts. Tanglewood Music Center in Lenox, Mass., is the summer home of the world-famous Boston Symphony Orchestra and is the permanent home of the Orchestra's Tanglewood Festival. This summer an NMSU faculty member had the chance to participate in the annual festivities.

Part-time Professor of Fine Arts Roy Houser was invited by Tanglewood administrator Richard Ortnor to demonstrate his custom designed Heckel bassoon and to work with talented bassoon students during an August workshop. Houser designed the 20-year-old bassoon with Franz Groffy, a relative of the famous German family Heckel that hand-makes bassoons.

The special features of the Heckel bassoon along with Houser's varied musical experiences were the key that allowed him to participate in the Festival.

The instrument cost Houser about $2,700 to make and includes several special features. One is a thin ring of solid 22 karat gold as well as several other rings of solid 18 karat gold. The bassoon also has a special trill key attachment not found on ordinary bassoons.

Campus Connections Improve University Adds Trunk Lines

Fifteen new trunk lines will be added to the University's telephone system by Oct. 23, David Rector, director of Computer Services, said.

Trunk lines are the telephone lines used to dial off of the University's private branch exchange (numbers with the 785 prefix).

"These are the lines you use when you call Pizza Hut, for example," Rector said.

Five of the new lines will be operator-assisted lines, which are used for long-distance collect and credit card calls.

Rector said the University currently has a total of 76 trunk lines, but cable work being done by Southwestern Bell occasionally ties up some of these lines.

"We've had a few complaints from parents and students about the service," Rector said.

He said a study conducted by Southwestern Bell concluded the University should install eight more lines in addition to the 15 installed this month.

All 23 new lines are scheduled to be installed by the end of November. This will give the University a total of 99 trunk lines.

Rector said cost is a big factor when considering additional lines.

"Each line costs $45 per month, which adds up to several thousand dollars per year," he said. "Southwestern Bell says the additional eight lines should take care of the current problems."

Lyceum Features Mozart's "Figaro"

The Lyric Opera of Kansas City will perform Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" in English with orchestra tonight at 8 p.m., in Baldwin Hall Auditorium. The performance is a Lyceum Series presentation. Financial assistance for this performance has been provided by the Missouri Arts Council, a state agency.

Ranked among the 15 leading opera companies in the United States, the Lyric Opera of Kansas City is celebrating its 30th Anniversary Season this year. This year's visit marks the Opera's fifth appearance on NMSU's stage; last year the Opera performed Giacomo Puccini's "Tosca" at Northeast.

The production of "Figaro" will be conducted by Russell Patterson and directed by Roger Brunyate, artistic director of the Peabody Conservatory Theatre in Baltimore, Md. Patterson founded the Lyric Opera and since its beginning, has been dedicated to producing opera as theatre and in English.

"The Marriage Of Figaro," based on the second of a trilogy of plays by French playwright Beaumarchais, is the story of two servants, Figaro and his fiancee Susanna, and their efforts to outwit the nobles. The familiar music of Mozart and the intriguing plot work together to provide an exciting comedy. "Figaro" contains some of Mozart's most memorable work.

N O T A B L E S

Jim Barnes, professor of English, has had several poems accepted for publication. His poem "The Reading" was accepted in The Phoenix Review, a literary magazine published by the Australian National University, Canberra. "Dog Days 1987," was accepted in an anthology of fiction, poetry and art titled Editor's Choice II. "La Plata Missouri: The Pastor's Farewell" will appear in Poetry Review. He also has an essay, titled "On Native Ground," appearing in I Tell You Know: Autobiographical Essays by Native American Writers, published last month by the University of Nebraska Press.

Benjamin Bennani, associate professor of English, recently read his poetry at William Penn College in Oskaloosa, Iowa. The reading was sponsored by the Department of English and the Book and Coffee Series at William Penn.

Paraschos Maniatis, associate professor of industrial science, presented two papers at the 8th Annual Conference by the American Society for Engineering Management (ASEM) in St. Louis, Oct. 13. Maniatis' papers were titled "Important Human Factors in Assembly Automation" and "Industrial Robots Management—People—Market—Applications—Future Trends."

Ed McEnderfer, associate professor of art, presented highlights of dissertation research, "Programming With Sixteen Million Colors," at Visions 87, a conference on computers in the visual arts at Southwest Missouri State University in Springfield, Sept. 18.

David Parteneimer's critique of WANDAH, a computer-assisted writing program, was published in The Writing Center Journal, Fall/Winter 1987.

Seymour Patterson, associate professor of economics, had his manuscript titled "Economic Expansion and the Theory of Customs Unions" published in the May 1987 issue of the International Review of Economics and Business.

Sue Peeler, a junior psychology major, had a poem, "Country Nights" accepted for publication in Today's Farmer magazine. She also received the first-place award in the Photography Division at the Red Barn Art Fair.

The bocal, a tube that connects the reed to the body of the instrument, is a gold-platinum mix formed by placing the piece in 1,800 degrees sand with lead.

"This is the only method that can form a bocal without making a seam," Houser said.

Another interesting feature of the bassoon is the engraved autograph of the late Franz Gruffy.

"It's the only one ever to have that," Houser said.

For Houser, the visit to Tanglewood brought back memories of the days when he studied there in 1941.

"Leonard Bernstein was a student there at the same time I was," Houser said. "We stayed in the same Jesuit compound and played tennis together once."

Now Bernstein is the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and is known for contemporary classics such as "West Side Story." Houser said Bernstein is presently focusing on more serious works.

"He is 70 years old, and he said his ambition is to compose serious, substantial symphonies—he wants to be remembered for those rather than for contemporary classics like "West Side Story," Houser said.

Although Houser spoke personally with Bernstein during his stay at Tanglewood, he didn't mention the tennis match.

"It didn't seem like an appropriate thing to bring up in the receiving line," Houser said.

The highlight of Houser's trip to Massachusetts was a celebration and performance on August 15 to commemorate the founder of Tanglewood, Serge Koussevitzky, and to celebrate Bernstein's birthday.

"It was a gala event—standing room only. Although it was Bernstein's birthday, the major reason for the celebration was the 50th anniversary of the founding of Tanglewood. Leonard Slatkin was the guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra," Houser said.

Slatkin is the current conductor of the St. Louis Symphony, and recently visited Kirksville with the Orchestra for its annual performance.

Houser said the town of Lenox hasn't changed much since his days as a student here.

"The town is more populated, but otherwise it is much the same. It has become a cultural center—a conclave of artists," Houser said.

Tanglewood is only one of the many places Houser has studied. A native of Centerville, Iowa, he received a bachelor's degree of music degree from Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y., in 1941; and earned his master's degree at Teachers College, Columbia University, N.Y. He has also studied at the University of Illinois, Urbana.

During World War II, Houser played in the Brooklyn-based 378th Service Forces Orchestra and also performed for war bonds with radio performances at Rockefeller Center in New York.

Houser has participated in several orchestras over the years, including the American Broadcasting Symphony at Rockefeller Center, the Birmingham Symphony, Birmingham, Ala., and the Lexington Kentucky Philharmonic.

Houser taught at a number of universities before retiring and accepting a part-time position at NMSU. He now resides in Canton, Mo. and travels to Kirksville each Tuesday to conduct six individual applied music lessons on double reeds.

Alumnus Receives Judicial Appointment

Gov. John Ashcroft appointed Stanley Grimm, a '54 NMSU alumnus, to the Missouri Court of Appeals at St. Louis in late June. Grimm replaces Chief Judge Robert Snyder who retired July 25.

Grimm has been a circuit judge in Bollinger and Cape Girardeau counties in southeastern Missouri since 1973. Ashcroft chose him from three nominees, including Circuit Judges Phillip Hess of Jefferson County and Floyd McBride of St. Louis.

While at Northeast, Grimm was a member of Pi Omega Pi, Pi Kappa Delta, Sigma Tau Gamma and Blue Key. He earned a juris doctorate from the University of Missouri School of Law in 1959 and began practicing law in Cape Girardeau where he and his wife, Jane, make their home.

The Grimms have three sons, including twins. During the week, Judge Grimm plans to live in St. Louis with one son who recently graduated from law school. Grimm's term on the Court of Appeals expires Dec. 31, 1992.
