Warren Shares Thoughts on Future

On Nov. 6, President Warren addressed students, faculty and staff in light of the defeat of Proposition B on Nov. 5 and thanked all of them as well as those "friends off campus" who worked in support of Prop B. Adair County was one of two counties in the state to pass Prop B. Following are excerpts from President Warren's remarks.

... Higher education as well as K through 12 was dealt a stinging blow yesterday, not only in the vote against Proposition B, but in the fact that the vote was resounding. Yet, Northeast is still alive and well, we are still one of the preeminent universities in the nation, we still have as our greatest asset a faculty and staff willing to be creative and hard working, and we still have a student body which shares with us the preeminent commitment of Northeast—the commitment to academic excellence. I want to be sure that you all fully know that, and I also want to share with you an even stronger sense of direction today than we had yesterday...

We are in charge of our own destiny and it is important that we have a sense of direction. It would have been remiss of me as a university president to not have a plan if Proposition B failed, and in fact, I began work on just such a plan several weeks ago...

There are two issues, in particular, that I know are of great concern. One is our ability not just to maintain, but to enhance the quality of Northeast and the other is the issue of student tuition...

The most important charge given to me by the Board of Governors, faculty and student body is to not let the quality of this institution—that means especially its academic quality—deteriorate under my watch. I am committed to that goal, and I know you are as well. It will remain my primary objective...

Indeed, I am here not to be president of a mediocre institution, but to be president of the best public liberal arts and sciences university in the nation. As president, I will keep those aspirations and our collective dreams alive.

How do we do that? How do we continue to build on quality without Proposition B?

... We had hoped the state would give us a financial plan to meet our aspirations, but now it is clear that we must develop our own. In fact, several weeks ago, as I began to prepare for the possibility that Proposition B would not pass, I asked Judy Mullins to work with Vice President Magruder and others to do just that—develop a long-range financial plan for Northeast. This will identify the needs which must be met to continue successful implementation of Order of Excellence, our next long-range plan. That study will be completed fairly soon—in the next two or three weeks.

Once that financial plan is known, we'll... make sure we are as efficient as possible. While recognizing that impartial outside observers believe that Northeast is among the most efficient universities in the nation, I feel we should nonetheless explore whether there are efficiencies yet to be realized...

... Once the long-range financial plan has been completed we must develop new revenue sources to allow us to maintain and enhance quality... Proposition B was not about whether Northeast will receive additional funds, it must. It was about the source of those funds. We must review all revenue...

Lyceum Series Presents A Christmas Carol

The Nebraska Theatre Caravan will bring its musical adaptation of Charles Dickens' A Christmas Carol to Northeast at 3 and 8 p.m., Nov. 23, in Baldwin Auditorium.

In 1977, the Nebraska Theatre Caravan, the professional touring wing of the Omaha Community Playhouse, took this enormous production including 36 people and 200 costumes on tour in the midwest. This is the fourth time the company has brought its production to Northeast.

This adaptation of A Christmas Carol is written by Charles Jones, artistic director of the Omaha Community Playhouse in Omaha, Neb. Interwoven in the classic story of Ebenezer Scrooge and all the beloved characters from Dickens' novella are traditional Christmas carols. "I think of this adaptation of A Christmas Carol as a masque," said Jones. "The songs do not move the story forward.

They stand apart from the text. Each carol in the show was chosen for the dramatic atmosphere it contributed to the final evening.

The songs are traditional but the scoring by musical arranger John Bennett is contemporary and exquisitely beautiful."

The show features set designs and special stage effects created by noted designer James Othuse. The set and special effects were designed with meticulous detail to recreate the world of Dickens' England of the 1800s. Among the special effects included in the show will be a 16-foot human puppet as the ghost of Christmas Future and a bed which has been rigged to mysteriously move about Scrooge's bedroom.

Free tickets for students, faculty and staff will be available beginning Nov. 18 at the Student Activities Office, SUB.

sources to see what enhancements are possible...

Since coming here, I have stressed one common theme and that is the theme of community. One aspect of being part of a community, is to instruct even when the instruction is lamentable. Today I must say that we do not have the financial resources to maintain our present quality, much less generate a higher level of quality, and one new source of revenue is accelerated tuition and fee charges. The alternative is a drop in quality...

... we will not increase tuition and fees in an attempt to close the financial gap... It must be done moderately for humane purposes and additional financial aid must be provided as a safety net so that no student will be denied access...

We are a university characterized by a high-ability student body which cares fervently about the quality of academic programs here, by a faculty willing to embrace change as a necessary element for progress, by a faculty and staff dedicated to creating an effective learning environment throughout campus, and by a national reputation which has been justly earned through years of innovation, dedication and commitment.

We will continue with the quest to make Northeast a recognized leader in higher education as evidenced by our new long-range plan. We will work equally hard demanding of the state that however limited the resources are, they give a lion's share to us because of our quality and accountability. It is time that the state pass out dollars to Northeast as easily as they have praise for what we have accomplished...

In good faith we commit ourselves to the accountability measures which would have been endorsed by the Coordinating Board for Higher Education had Proposition B passed. We will do this as evidence of our continuing good stewardship, but also because they represent the right thing to do.

Vice President Magruder, Ray George, President Warren and Dean Van Galen visit during a reception held in Van Galen's honor, Nov. 1. Van Galen, Missouri's Professor of the Year, received a $1,000 check from George, who represented Merck Corp. which sponsored Missouri's competition.
